full game Hello I am Aunty Oh and let me tell you about the first time I played a Triple Triad Game! When I was 12 years old I received a Christmas gift of a Timex watch. The Timex is quite a simple watch. There's a three-way switch on the bottom of the watch. To operate the watch you push up and down on the switch to start and stop the timer. A push up on the switch resets the watch. At the time I was 12 years old. I thought that I was an expert on watches and that I could tell the difference between a quartz watch and a mechanical watch. I was very proud of my Timex watch. It was easy to use. It was just like a kitchen timer. I would use it to see how long it would take to bake cookies or to see how long it would take me to finish reading a chapter in a book. I didn't really notice the odd colours on the watch until much later in life. The colour combination was odd because it was black on the front and white on the bottom. The colour combination made the Timex watch look like a child's toy. Then one day I realised that the watches in the magazines I had on my shelf had much more appealing colour combinations. I don't remember why I decided to buy one of the watches. Perhaps it was the influence of the short-lived teen fashion. Or maybe it was because I thought that the colour combinations of the watches were nicer than the ones on my Timex. As I was thumbing through the magazines, I noticed that some of the watches had three colours. For example, the photo above was from the May 1975 issue of W. I could not remember if this was a magazine that I read. I would have had to look back at my old copy of the magazines I had. Then I would have to compare each of the watches in that magazine. But when I looked for the May 1975 issue of W Magazine at the library, I was surprised to see that it was not there! At the time, I didn't know that there were different colour combinations in a watch. I did not know that there were yellow, red, and blue watches or yellow, green, and white. I don't think that the colour of a watch was important to me. I had no idea that people would spend a lot of money on different colours
